Electronic Funds Transfers Available for Federal Benefits - In April 1996, the Debt Collection Improvement Act of 1996 was signed into law. This legislation requires the use of electronic funds transfers (EFT) for most federal benefit payments (Social Security, Veterans, etc.). Even though this legislation requires payments to be made electronically, people who would encounter a hardship receiving electronic payments due to location, disability, or language can still receive their payments by check, as they always have. If no hardship would be encountered, federal benefit recipients can choose to receive their benefits by direct deposit into their existing checking/savings account or by electronic funds transfer. For people who do not have a checking/savings account, a new low-cost account is available to federal benefit recipients allowing recipients to receive their benefits electronically into these accounts. Banking institutions across the country are making these accounts available, including Indian owned banking institutions.

To assist benefit recipients, the Department of Treasury is sponsoring the EFT Campaign which offers free resources to help recipients make sound decisions as to how they receive their monthly benefit payments. The campaign also offers financial literacy training for the more than $7 million federal benefit recipients. A community education guide and training services are available free-of-charge to interested organization.
